Dresses, Dreams and Beadwood Leaves

by Julia Taylor Ebel

illustrations by the author and end notes on herb gathering

Author of Addie Clawson: Rural Mail Carrier – honored at the National Postal Museum of the Smithsonian Institution

A girl's journey to mold her own self esteem within the cultural history of the North Carolina mountains

Rosa May wears dresses made from feed sacks, but her earthy knowledge of roots and herbs gives her hope of owning a store-bought dress and feeds her dream of wearing nurse's white. Ebel sets her story in the late 1940s, where root and herb gathering offered many mountain people a way to meet both needs and dreams.

INGALLS PUBLISHING GROUP Books are distributed through Atlas Books. Libraries served by Atlas, Follett, Ingram, and other wholesalers may order IPG Books through their regular channels. However, we are happy to serve libraries, schools and organizations directly, and to offer discounts on book cost and shipping.

* Classroom sets, curriculum and special packages available only from the author or publisher.

Contact our sales manager for discounts on quantity purchases for resale.
